1. In January 1952, a trench system was completed in the Golyamo Krushevo area (N4212 E2653). A trench system near Stefan Karadzhovo (N4213 E2649) was scheduled for completion by March 1952. The trenches were begun after World War II. Approximately 750 Trudovaks were at work at each of the two sites, in addition to a transport company of 250 men.

2. The trenches follow a zig-zag pattern and vary in length. Each trench is 116 centimeters deep with an upper width of 120 centimeters and a lower width of 50 centimeters. The interval between the trenches is 20 meters.

A fighter post is located between the forward thrusts of each trench line. The sketch of the fortifications enclosed herewith as an appendix

3. The Trudovaks working on the fortifications were billeted with farm families in groups of four or five. Each Trudovak was equipped with two spades and a pickaxe; engineering equipment was supplied as needed. [redacted] company at Golyamo Krushhevo had three 3-ton ZIS trucks at its disposal; the company at Stefan Karadzhovo had 17 trucks of the same type.
4. The Trudovaks at Stefan Karadzhovo had no food depot. Food and fuel was stored north of the village at a fenced-in plot of ground, adjacent to which were three small powder magazines which were underground and covered with earth. The entire area was guarded day and night.
5. There is only one trench line at Stefan Karadzhovo [redacted]
[redacted] It forms a crescent around the village.
6. There are four lines of trenches emanating from Golyamo Krushhevo. The first line lies 200 or 300 meters south of the village and extends for two kilometers. The second line is also two kilometers long; it is located 300 meters beyond the first line. The third and fourth lines, seven and five kilometers long respectively, form the outer perimeter.
